Educators of color will have the opportunity to build community and share in a healing space, while white educators will learn how to be effective antiracist allies by examining their white privilege and systemic racism. All participants will participate in a racial affinity group discussion and learn how to set up affinity groups in their school or district. Participants will:

- Unpack our racialized trauma in racial affinity groups
- Build community and share in a healing space
- Examine white privilege and systemic racism to be effective antiracist allies
- Recognize and critically reflect on personal beliefs, attitudes, and biases
- Learn how to launch affinity groups in your school/district
- See affinity groups as retention tools that support educators of color and help them remain in the profession.
